General Objective

To develop a three-dimensional interactive simulation game that promotes mental-health awareness and emotional coping skill development among young adults aged 17 to 25 experiencing mild-to-moderate anxiety.

Specific Objectives

- To design and develop a third-person narrative-driven simulation game that allows users to experience realistic anxiety-related scenarios through interactive gameplay, decision-making activities, and CBT-based coping features such as NPC interaction, Breathing Exercise, Thought Courtroom, reflection journals, and assessment systems.

- To design and develop an online database system for storing user accounts, journal records, assessment results, chapter progression, and save-and-load gameplay data to improve accessibility and user experience across supported platforms.

- To test and evaluate the online database system and overall performance of MindScape 3D using the ISO/IEC 25010 software quality standards to ensure functionality, usability, reliability, performance efficiency, and user accessibility across supported platforms.

NPC Dialogue System

All NPCs use a guided-discovery dialogue system that follows a four-stage Socratic structure. The game allows players to work out answers independently using strategies like open questions, reflection, and summary.

- Ask stage - The NPC questions players to gather information they possess but may have missed.
- Listen stage - NPCs look at answers objectively, allowing players to complete comments.
- Summarize stage - The NPC shapes answers to relay to players the structure and pattern of their thoughts.
- Synthesize stage - The NPC offers a question to the players to determine how the information may relate to their personal experiences and the actions they may wish to take.

Decision-Making

Each scenario has multiple endings and shifting dialogue depending on choices made. The game demonstrates the result of each choice without suggesting an answer. Players decide right and wrong for themselves.

Coping Mini-Games

This game has two mini-games that highlight prominent research-backed coping skills. They can be accessed while playing the game as you explore different scenarios, and also through the made-in feature in the persistent pause menu.

- Breathing Exercise — A guided activity for breathing with the diaphragm, with a four-count inhale and a six-count exhale, with the aid of concerning visuals and pleasant audio.
- Thought Courtroom — A mini game for cognitive restructuring in the form of a courtroom drama. The player collects evidence for and against the anxious thought before arriving at a more balanced thought.

Reflection Journal

After every chapter, players write their reactions to carefully crafted prompts. They can access their entries at any time in the main menu, where they are stored free of any guidelines.

Guide Panel

A short onboarding sequence introduces the player to movement controls, interaction prompts, and the guiding philosophy of the game, delivered as a guided walk through a safe hub environment.

Emotional Safety Design

The game applies warm color palettes, gentle transitions, calm ambient music, trigger warnings at sensitive scenes, and a persistent breathe button to protect the player's emotional well-being throughout gameplay.

Resources Screen

A persistent screen accessible at any time from the pause menu, providing direct access to mental-health crisis resources. The default configuration includes national hotlines

Third-Person Gameplay System

MindScape 3D uses a third-person gameplay perspective to provide players with better environmental awareness, character visibility, and interactive navigation throughout the game scenarios.

Online Database Integration

The system uses database integration for storing user accounts, assessment records, journal entries, chapter progression, and saved gameplay information. This feature supports online accessibility and progress synchronization across supported platforms.
